Roundabout proposed to improve intersection at Highway 41, Reflectance Drive

PATRICK VILLEGAS

patrick@thedanielislandnews.com

State transportation leaders are proposing a traffic circle to improve the intersection of Highway 41 at Reflectance Drive and Halfway Creek Road.

The intersection, which is a well-traveled corridor to Clements Ferry Road, Mount Pleasant, and the town of Huger, has become an area of increasing concern as residents and commuters say heavy traffic, high speeds, and inattention are contributing to dangerous driving conditions.

Last week, a 71-year-old man died at the intersection in a three-car collision.

The South Carolina Department of Transportation said the purpose of the proposed roundabout is to “increase operational efficiency while reducing the frequency and severity of crashes occurring at the intersection.”

A “drop-in style” public meeting is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 10, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Philip Simmons Middle School. Officials will be on hand to answer questions regarding their plan to install the four-leg, single-lane roundabout.

“The project is expected to enter the bidding (letting) process in 2027 with visible construction anticipated to begin in 2028,” according to SCDOT communications officer Jennifer Timmons.

Construction is expected to take about 12 months.

Wade Malloch, a Huger resident who held a community meeting about the intersection that drew 300 people in March, questioned why the project can't be fast-tracked.

“What does that mean? Fourth quarter of 2028? Technically, that can be 29 months from now,” he said, after learning of the 2028 construction timeline. “I don't understand it. These accidents should pretty much speak for themselves that something needs to be done faster.”

Following last week's fatal accident, Malloch reached out to SCDOT officials

asking to speed up the timeline.

Jae Mattox, SCDOT's director of traffic engineering, responded to Malloch, explaining that because the project is tied to federal funds through the Highway Safety Improvement Program, completion would take some time.

“Projects funded through HSIP must complete several federally mandated steps before construction can begin,” Mattox wrote. “These include engineering studies, public involvement, environmental review, right-of-way acquisition, utility coordination and relocation, and other project development activities. While these steps take time, they are essential to delivering a well-designed and effective project.”

While the design phase and public period input continue, Mattox said SCDOT will continue its short-term improvements, “including upgrading signs and pavement markings, clearing vegetation, and improving sight distance.”

Malloch noted that he understands the federal requirements, but said the department's short-term improvements could be better to reduce accidents and save lives, questioning why the department can't incorporate “temporary fixes like rumble sticks or a four-way flasher” to “at least put a Band-Aid on it.”

SCDOT is encouraging public feedback on the proposal at projectportal.scdot.org/sc-41-S100-Intersection. The comment period runs from Aug. 27 through Sept. 24.

$24M Point Hope development deal paves way for 778 homes

EMMA SLAVEN

emma@thedanielislandnews.com

Anyone driving along Clements Ferry Road can see Point Hope taking shape as a town center, with homes, schools, shops, restaurants, parks, and trails now part of everyday life on the Cainhoy Peninsula.

But the community is far from done growing, and its next addition will be a big one.

Mount Pleasant-based TBC Development purchased 92 acres in Point Hope for $24 million, with plans to build 778 homes in one of the Charleston region's fastest-growing corridors.

The project, dubbed "Restore II - A Multi-Generational Community," will include single-family homes, attached homes, townhomes, and income-restricted housing for workforce and first-time buyers. Plans also call for apartments and cottages for adults 55 and older, along with an assisted-living and memory-care center.

For TBC founder Tony Berry, the deal represents more than just another land acquisition.

"Restore II is going to be a very special neighborhood in one of the region's last great master-planned communities," Berry said in a press release.

Three development partners are already attached to the project: David Weekley Homes, Mungo Homes, and Panther Residential Management.

David Weekley Homes, which previously partnered with TBC on the 55-plus Restore at Carolina Park in Mount Pleasant, will construct single-family and attached homes.

Columbia-based Mungo Homes, now part of Clayton Properties Group, will build attached single-family residences intended for workforce buyers and residents 55 and older.

Boston-based Panther Residential will partner with TBC on the active-adult, assisted-living, and memory-care portions of Restore II.

"We've been looking for the right opportunity to team up with TBC, and this is it," Panther Residential principal Eric Wardrop said. "Restore II is the kind of all-ages community the Charleston area wants and needs, and we're pleased to be part of the team that'll make it a reality."

Point Hope is approved for as many as 18,000 homes, although project leaders have said the final total will probably land between 11,000 and 12,000 over the next 15 to 20 years, depending on demand.

The community currently connects neighborhoods with schools, businesses, medical services, parks and trails, and about 60% of the property is expected to remain protected as marshes, wetlands, parks, and open space.

The corridor already includes three Philip Simmons schools, established neighborhoods, and a Publix-anchored commercial center, while additional apartments, townhomes, and active-adult communities continue to rise nearby.

Lifestyle Communities is also developing LC Point Hope, a 450-unit apartment and townhome community with 15,000 square feet of retail. Announced businesses include the wellness studio CODE, Morning Ritual Coffee, and The Goat social hub focused on food and drinks.

My wife yellow-carded me in my own kitchen

DALTON WILLIAMS

I perused the bottles in the liquor cabinet looking for a familiar brand but couldn't find it. Finally, I hollered to my lovely wife, Grace. "Honey, do you know where the Makers is at?"

Grace, stirring a pot on the stove, replied, "First, I'm in the next room, so you don't need to holler. Second, don't end a sentence with a preposition. And third, I moved the bourbon bottle out of play for the rest of today. Remember?"

Then I did recall why my favorite cocktail friend was missing. I paused and mused about when and how things began to go wrong.

In early June, the FIFA World Cup tournament kicked off. Not being a die-hard futbol fan myself, I figured Grace would prefer the Hallmark channel over soccer. Boy, was I mistaken.

Grace was all in from the start of the Group Stage. She watched all of the U.S. matches against Paraguay, Australia, and Turkey. Cape Verde captivated her attention. We had to move meal times to accommodate viewing contests in the rounds of 32 and 16.

Over dinner, Grace would regale me with the performances of Haaland, Mbappe, Bellingham, and Messi. She loved the Norwegian fans rowing and was thrilled by the Argentine comebacks against Egypt and England.

During one of the early matches, the game stopped and the announcer reported a player had received a yellow card. Grace asked what that was. Not wanting to bore Grace with the rules like unsporting behavior or intentionally slowing the game, I just replied they received a penalty for doing something wrong.

"Really?" Grace asked. "Did they know it was wrong when they did it?"

"Oh, yeah," I answered. "Some of them do it over and over."

"Really?" Grace replied again, nodding her head and looking deep in thought.

After a long pause, she asked, "Is the yellow to remind them to stop doing it?"

"Yep, you could put it that way," I said.

And put it that way, she did.

The next morning, I poured a glass of orange juice and headed toward the kitchen counter where Grace was seated sipping a cup of coffee. She reached into the pocket of her robe, pulled out a slip of paper, and announced, "Yellow card!"

"What?" I muttered, trying to figure out what just happened.

Grace was prepared. In her hand was a nicely cut piece of yellow construction paper. She held it aloft and pointed toward the refrigerator.

"Yellow card for leaving the fridge door open," she explained.

"I... I was going to close the door," I mumbled.

"Actually," Grace shot back, "you walked away from the fridge after you poured your juice. It's both an intentional delay in closing as well as a failure to close. Definitely a yellow card."

Her command of the moment was evident, although I did catch a glimpse of a sly smile.

That was just the first yellow card. Ensuing days resulted in a collection of more cards. She had a healthy supply of yellow construction paper cards. Leaving the cabinet door open. Failure to water plants on the front porch. Leaving coupons in the car at CVS. I'd plead for distractions and mitigating circumstances. The penalties stood. I asked for replays. None were granted. Yellow card for failure to disengage my turn signal after changing lanes. Yellow card for putting the mayonnaise lid sloppy-side down on the counter. Yellow card for the TV remote that "wandered off" by itself. And don't get me started on yellow cards in the bathroom.

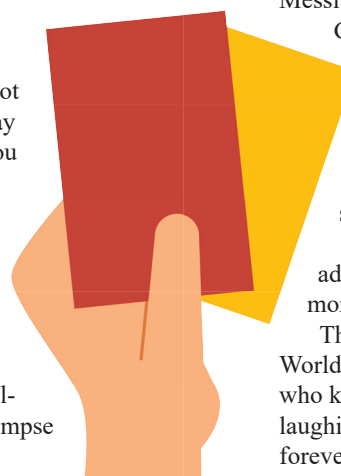

Similar to FIFA rules, two yellow cards on the same day resulted in a red card – a suspension from play. In my case, I was not sent packing, but an activity or thing I liked was declared "out of play" by Grace. No trip today to the halfway house for a soft serve. No bluegrass music until tomorrow. And my bottle of bourbon MIA for a day.

As the world knows, Spain won the 2026 World Cup, in what may have been Lionel Messi's swan song in this international event.

Grace watched and enjoyed the whole game. After it ended, I inquired, gently, if the yellow and red cards would continue here at home. Grace chuckled and cooed, "That was just a little whimsy on my part, dear. We can stop now."

I smiled back as Grace gave me a hug, adding, "But I do hope it added a little more precision to your game around here."

That made me feel as if I had won the World Cup. Great marriages deserve referees who know the difference between a foul worth laughing about and a heart worth keeping forever.

Thieves target cars in Clements Ferry subdivision

STAFF REPORT

news@thedanielislandnews.com

The following incidents were taken from the City of Charleston Police Department's crime reports within Team 5, which covers Daniel Island, Clements Ferry Road, and parts of Cainhoy, between July 1-15.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT

On Wednesday, July 1, an officer was called to Foundation Street in reference to a male subject causing a disturbance at an apartment complex. Officers had been dispatched to this location multiple times over the previous two days. Earlier on June 29, the same individual was reported unconscious on the stoop of his apartment. During the more recent occasion, police stated the individual was highly intoxicated, had fallen face down on concrete steps, and refused EMS transport. Police said the offender was irate and uncooperative. Police made an arrest for public disorderly conduct.

DRIVING UNDER THE INFLUENCE

Team 5 responded to a two-car collision on I-526 West past Clements Ferry Road on Saturday, July 4. Police observed a vehicle flipped on its side. The occupant was sent to the hospital with injuries. Another lane was occupied by a vehicle facing the wrong direction with a large dent in the passenger-side rear door. The female driver of the vehicle was sitting next to the vehicle. Police said the driver appeared intoxicated and conducted a field sobriety test. An arrest was made based on probable cause. While waiting for transport, police said the woman slipped out of her handcuffs and moved to the front of the police cruiser, attempting sexual advances at the officer. After being handcuffed more securely, she was transported to Al Cannon Detention Center. Police said the suspect attempted to assault two officers during the breath alcohol testing, eventually refusing the test. All interactions were captured on camera. She was charged with driving under the influence, refusing a test, and resisting arrest.

HIT-AND-RUN COLLISION

On Wednesday, July 8, an officer responded to I-526 near Clements Ferry Road in reference to a motor vehicle collision. Upon arrival, the officer observed multiple vehicles stopped on the highway. The driver of a pick-up truck stated that he felt something hit the back of his vehicle. He said he began to lose control, drove off the roadway into the median, struck a metal barricade, and came to a rest in the middle of the highway. On the right side of his vehicle, the officer noticed a paint transfer that started from the front bumper and continued to the rear passenger side. The driver stated that there had not been previous damage to the vehicle. An investigation is underway.

MOTOR VEHICLE THEFT

On Tuesday, July 14, an officer responded to a Clements Ferry subdivision on Tangles Trail in reference to a complaint of vandalism and theft from four motor vehicles. Vehicles parked in residential driveways were observed with their doors unsecured and partially opened. The center consoles and glove compartments of these vehicles had been rummaged through, with their belongings scattered throughout. Two vehicles had nothing removed. A third car had a briefcase stolen from the rear seat. A wallet had been taken from a fourth car, but it was later located in the middle of the street and returned. Twenty dollars in cash was missing. Surveillance video from a nearby residence captured two young men in ski masks and gloves roaming the area.

Look Who's Here: 295 Seven Farms Drive Popular building more than just karate, pizza, and packing

emma@thedanielislandnews.com

The businesses located at 295 Seven Farms Drive encapsulate Daniel Island's vibrant retail and office commercial district. Built in 2002, the mixed-use building is three stories tall and holds approximately 24,000 square feet of office and retail space.

Postal Haus is a locally owned shipping and business service center run by Daniel Island residents Renee and George Gutzwiller. Beyond UPS, FedEx, and United States Postal Service shipping, the shop offers professional packing, printing, mailbox rentals, notary services, shredding, key cutting, and Renee's stationery line, which is sold in more than 250 retailers nationwide.

"We get to help our neighbors out through life's big and small moments – sending care packages to grandchildren, shipping college move-in boxes, notarizing important documents, or simply making someone's busy day a little easier," Renee said. "It's rewarding to own a business where relationships matter and where familiar faces become friends."

Shred America Charleston is a veteran-owned information destruction company providing secure document shredding, hard drive destruction, and records management for businesses and residents.

"Working with local businesses, schools, nonprofits, and residents gives us the opportunity to build meaningful relationships while helping protect sensitive information," said asset manager Kiley Mattson.

Osupurē Karate has been part of Daniel Island since 2003, teaching traditional Wado Ryu Karate to students from age 3 through adulthood.

"Karate is for everyone, regardless of physical or cognitive limitations. We do not teach how to fight. We teach how to control one's actions and emotions to avoid fighting," owner Sensei Glenn Raus said.

Raus said the best part of doing business on Daniel Island is seeing the kids in his dojo grow into wonderful young adults.

Orlando's Pizza has served hand-tossed New York-style pizza baked in a brick oven alongside pasta and salads since 2004. Its dough and sauces are made in-house using original family recipes.

"It's a close-knit community that looks out for each other and its businesses on the island," Orlando's John Geng said of operating on Daniel Island.

32 South Properties is a Charleston real estate brokerage led by Terry and Tim Haas, helping clients buy and sell homes through personalized guidance and marketing across the local market.

"Daniel Island isn't just where we work – it's home," Haas said. "Watching our clients become neighbors and friends is the most rewarding part of what we do."

Connections Counseling Center provides mental health counseling for children, teens, adults, couples, and families, addressing concerns including anxiety, depression, grief, and trauma through individualized therapy.

"Daniel Island is a close-knit, supportive community that truly values relationships and well-being," said owner and counselor Kristen Groos. "We're grateful to partner with local families, schools, physicians, and businesses to make mental healthcare more accessible."

Hill Construction is a commercial general contractor founded in 1956 that relocated to Daniel Island in 2002. The company provides pre-construction, design/build, construction management, and general contracting services and has completed several island projects, including the Daniel Island Recreation Center.

"We are good stewards of our community and proud that many of our projects make up the fabric of everyday life on Daniel Island," President and CEO Chip Crane said. "After more than two decades, this vibrant community continues to evolve, and we are excited to be a part of the future."

Charleston Landscape LLC is a design, installation, and landscape contracting firm that has completed more than 1,000 Low-country projects since 2006, specializing in residential and commercial landscapes, hardscapes, irrigation, and outdoor living spaces.

Snapshot OF SUMMER

Compiled by Emma Slaven

Who said summer break meant slowing down? Daniel Island and Cainhoy area kids have spent these humid months digging in the dirt, testing out science experiments, filling their schedules with camps and, for one group, traveling all the way to Belize. Here's a glimpse at some of the moments they'll remember when they look back on summer 2026.

Bishops ready for new region foes as practice gets underway

PHILIP M. BOWMAN

sports@thedanielislandnews.com

Logan Hall inherited a program at its crossroads when he was named the coach of the Bishop England High School football team in time for the 2024 season.

The Battling Bishops won back-to-back Class AA state titles beginning with the 2011 season, but a little over a decade later the team struggled to score points, let alone win games.

Hall's rebuilding project was even tougher because the Bishops were classified at Class AAAA thanks to a multiplier used by the South Carolina High School League to create a competitive balance. Basically, every BE student who attended the school from outside their assigned geographic attendance zone counted as three students.

Hall refused to use the classification as an excuse, although his team faced opponents that had two to three times more students than Bishop England.

The results? The Bishops posted a 17-7 record in their two-year stint at Class AAAA. The Bishops won the Region 6-AAAA championship in his first season and reached postseason play both years.

Not only did the Bishops win games, but Hall helped many players reach the next level as they continued their careers at the college level.

Hall, who proved to be an offensive guru at Pinewood Prep High School before accepting the BE job, didn't go unnoticed.

Late last year, the American Football Coaches Association announced its 2026 Leadership Institute's 35 Under 35, a program designed to identify and develop premier future leaders in the football coaching profession under the age of 35. Hall was the only coach selected from the high school ranks.

The Bishops begin practice this week, and the landscape has changed. They will compete at the Class AAA level for at least the next two seasons. The foes will still have an advantage in the numbers category. But don't be surprised if the Bishops prove bigger doesn't necessarily mean better.

Hall expects to greet 14 returning starters and about 40 lettermen. The team created energy during summer workouts. Now, it's time to keep the momentum flowing.

"Summer is going great," Hall said. "Attendance and consistency have been great.

Max-outs are this week with some guys pushing to get on the all-time board, which is awesome."

The team has talent – and depth. But there are positions to be filled, including quarterback. Now that Quinn Mahoney and his 3,907 yards and 37 TD passes have graduated.

"The biggest concern is getting our young players in the right spot to go make plays on Friday nights. We have talent, just lack gameday experience."

William Donato, who passed for 337 yards and five TDs last fall, and Banks Luton, who transferred from Oceanside Collegiate, are the top candidates to replace Mahoney.

The passing and running games should benefit from an offensive line that has talent and experience.

Five players on this season's roster are getting recruited to play at the next level. They include Matthew Ponkow (Penn, Dartmouth, Yale, Brown, Charleston Southern, and Newberry); Finn Corley (Hampden-Sydney); Chase Tonon (ETSU, Citadel, App State, and Miami of Ohio); Trevor Tonon (ETSU, Citadel, App State, and Miami of Ohio) and John Diliegro (Gardner-Webb, Lafayette, and Anderson).

The Bishops will compete in Region 5-AAA against the likes of three-time defending state champ Oceanside Collegiate Academy, Hanahan, North Charleston, and Georgetown.

"We are excited to match up with everyone and see how we match up as a school with the smallest enrollment out of the group," Hall said after his team's spring game. "We are excited for the opportunity to prove we can compete with anybody, anywhere."

'I want to succeed and keep her memory alive' Iron Horse lineman dedicates season to late mother

sports@thedanielislandnews.com

Philip Simmons High School football player Bernard Jenkins' mother passed away July 13. The 5-foot-8, 260-pound senior lineman went to workouts the next day because he wanted to be with the rest of his family, his teammates.

"My teammates, we've been together for a long time," said Jenkins, a Huger native. "We've worked together and celebrated victories together. My teammates are like my best friends, my brothers. We're a close-knit group at Philip Simmons. We're family."

Jenkins' mother Crystal "Latoya" Manigault-Ricks passed away unexpectedly at the age of 45, her son said.

"My first reaction was I couldn't process it," Jenkins said. "This can't be. She's had health issues before, but she pulled through."

Jenkins said his mother was his main inspiration and was with him every step of the way, whether it was in the classroom or the gridiron. She was there for him last year when he suffered a season-ending knee injury, tearing his ACL.

"I'm dedicating the season to her," Jenkins said. "She was my inspiration and showed me the way. I am setting goals for the season, and I want to follow through on them. I have set goals in the weight room and the football field. I want to succeed and keep her memory alive."

Jenkins was joined by many of his teammates and coaches for a celebration of Crystal's life on July 19 at the New Hope United Methodist Church in Huger. There were hugs, a few tears, and massive support.

"That meant the world to me," Jenkins said. "You know who is there for you, who is there to support you."

Coach Eric Bendig describes Jenkins as a "very quiet" leader who is one of the hardest workers on the Iron Horse football team. Jenkins has been with the program since the eighth grade but has been slowed by injuries in the past. But he's healthy and ready to contribute as the Iron Horses seek another region title, another deep playoff run, with the goal of celebrating a potential state title.

"Bernard has worked in the weight room to be one of our strongest players to ever suit up for us," Bendig said. "He's had some injuries over the years, but he always had the work ethic, smile, and attitude to get through it."

"He is loved by teammates and coaches because he cares about them and this team," Bendig added. "He is a smart football player and person. He is loved by everyone in our program and in the community."

Jenkins is a typical senior thinking about his final year in high school while pondering the future. He's weighing his options, which could include studying to become an aircraft mechanic at Trident Tech or matriculating to Coastal Carolina.

But first, there's his final season of battling the opponent in the trenches, where games are won – or lost.

"Our biggest goal, of course, is to win the state championship," Jenkins said. "We've established ourselves as a great program, and we've become a great team under coach Bendig. Hopefully, we'll play in the state championship and come back with a ring."

Government meeting results

Here are the developments before the various City of Charleston boards and committees this week, as well as results, if any, from the prior week's items specific to Daniel Island and the Cainhoy area. More detailed agendas and results can be found at charleston-sc.gov/agendacenter

RESULTS: TECHNICAL REVIEW COMMITTEE

Thursday, July 23: The Daniel Island Golf Club Teaching & Laundry Facilities. Proposed construction of a teaching facility, laundry facility, and associated infrastructure on 3.8 acres at 600 Island Park Drive, Daniel Island. TMS: B2710000001. Owner: Daniel Island Golf Club LLC. Applicant: Thomas & Hutton. Contact: Jim Ducker. Results: Revise and Return.

Mayor Cogswell to speak at next DI neighborhood meeting Sept. 9

City of Charleston Mayor William Cogswell is scheduled to speak and answer questions at the next Daniel Island Neighborhood Association meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 9.

DINA president Nick Kalkas said the mayor will be giving a state of the city presentation at 6:30 p.m., followed by a half hour of Q&A. The meeting will be held at the Daniel Point Retirement Center auditorium.

In addition, DINA is expected to review the results of an ongoing study regarding parking at the Daniel Island waterfront. The owners of an adjacent gravel lot primarily used for parking announced the parcel will be developed into a small hotel.

Also scheduled to speak: Danielle Stix of the Daniel Island Community Fund; Charleston city councilmembers Boyd Gregg and Mike Seekings; Berkeley County councilmember Jarrod Brooks; and Team 5 police commander Joe Harvill.

The Good and the Bad

Choose the correct answers in the sentences below.

- 1. Ryan plays golf (bad, badly).
- 2. I can't see the stage very (good, well) from here.
- 3. I felt (bad, badly) that I backed into Matt's car.
- 4. Dawn's feet don't smell (good, well).
- 5. The kids behaved (bad, badly) at the restaurant.

Answers: 1. badly. Use the adverb with the verb plays.
2. well. Use the adverb with the verb see.
3. bad. Because the verb felt is a linking verb, use the adjective bad.
4. good. Smell is another linking verb, so use the adjective good.
5. badly. Use the adverb with the verb behaved.
